100% Hemp Bark Fiber
This hemp bark fiber is pealed directly from the hemp stalks. This is about as raw as it gets. It has not been processed or combed. The lengths are very long since they run the entire height of the plant but can be up to 10 5 feet. This fiber is flat and about 1/4 inch wide. It is similar to corn husk in that the fibers have not been separated from one another. This fiber can be used for insulation in packaging, stuffing, or decoration.

100% Medium Hemp Fiber, American Grown, Uncombed
This American grown raw hemp fiber is right from the stalk. It has not been processed or combed, but the fibers have been slightly separated from one another. The fiber lengths can be anywhere from 24 inches to 72 inches. Used in a variety of products such as paper, building materials, insulation, twine, stuffing, and rope.

100% Short Hemp Fiber
This raw hemp fiber has been cut to pieces averaging around .625 cm in length (0.25 inches). It has not been processed or combed in any other way. This fiber is used for a variety of products such as paper, building materials, insulation for moldings, twine, and stuffing. It can be blended into a liquid without tangling for use as a strengthening agent in plastic or plaster.

100% De-gummed Hemp Fiber
De-gummed hemp fiber is raw hemp fiber which has been processed to remove lignin. Lignin is a product of the hemp plant which holds fibers together and gives the stalks their rigidity. When removed from the fibers, they begin to separate, becoming softer and finer. These fibers are now thin enough for spinning alone or blending with other fibers. The size ranges from [illegible] inch to 5 inches. De-gummed hemp fiber is soft, absorbent and may be used as a natural stuffing for upholstery or pillows, or used as a soft animal bedding.

100% Combed Hemp Fiber
Hemp sliver. [illegible] combed fiber is the step just before spinning into yarn and is used to make twine, yarn, cordage, textiles, paper and hand crafts. Also known as plumbers hemp. It can be used to help seal pipes. Fiber length > 70-100mm (4-5 inches long). A grade.

100% Hemp Hurd
Hemp hurd is derived from the core of the hemp stalks. Also known as hemp shives, it looks similar to [illegible] chips and is composed of short, woody fibers. Its porous nature allows the free flow of air and makes it very absorbent. It is naturally resistant to mold and bacteria, making it excellent as an animal bedding for both small mammals and horses. It can also be used as an all natural growing medium for both indoor and outdoor gardening. This product is the raw material used to make both hempcrete (hemp cement) as well as pressed fiberboard.
